New Friends, New Traditions

A new location brings new opportunities—and new friends. Derek McGuire and his sister Lori (McGuire) VanDuyne, with her husband, Brian VanDuyne, are delighted to bring their family's tradition of fine jewelry to Plymouth. Whether it symbolizes a special bond or simply says, "I love you," diamonds and fine jewelry are investments. Fernbaugh's knowledgeable staff will be there to help customers choose the perfect pieces to celebrate all the special moments of their lives.

A Tradition of Friendship Since 1933

When Earl and Geraldine Fernbaugh opened their doors, it wasn't long before the small jewelry repair shop became a full-service jewelry store. And soon customers weren't just customers—they were friends. The Fernbaugh family earned their clients' trust by their courteous service, quality repair work, and, of course, their wide selection of beautiful jewelry and gemstones.

In 1982, long-time Fernbaugh's employee Oris McGuire and his wife Sally acquired the business. The tradition of customer care and exceptional merchandise has continued, and though the store has grown with the times, one thing has always stayed the same: the commitment to a family-owned business that treats every customer as a friend.
